We now have diagnostic tools and services that give results in hours rather than days. In July 2015, results from an interim analysis of the Guinea Phase III efficacy vaccine trial showed that VSV-EBOV (Merck, Sharp & Dohme) is highly effective against Ebola. We have an effective global registry of Foreign Medical Teams that continues to grow and is now being used to respond to Ebola and other ...

How small-molecule drugs fit into binding pockets in their targets is one of the central questions of medicinal chemistry. A new paper from a group at Oxford gives a good example of how varied that process can be – it's looking at a number of drugs that have been shown to interfere (to some degree) with infection by the Ebola virus. Ebola has been the subject of a number of screens, which ...
