According to Tal and Langer, the experience of trauma is so unique that only its survivors can hope to convey its horrors; any literary trappings such as characterization or point of view compromise and distort the expression of this experience.

Project MUSE - Trauma and Survival in Contemporary Fiction

Trauma is an emotional response to an intense event that threatens or causes harm. The harm can be physical or emotional, real or perceived, and it can threaten the child or someone close to him or her. Trauma can be the result of a single event, or it can result from exposure to multiple events over time.
